

ENTRANCE ACCREDITATION IN THE EDUCATION & TRAINING POST-SECONDARY SCHOOL PATHS

The "A.R.G.O." Project (the human resources accreditation to grant occupation) aims at recognising and emphasizing the skills acquired not only throughout formal and informal training programs, but also through working experiences, in order to allow people to access higher secondary formation courses, that is to permit the recognition of one's professional skills at a European level. This acknowledgement will certainly favour mobility on the territory, but, in a more general ground, it will permit the comparison between different professional training and educational experiences, with no homogeneity aim. In order to reach this goal, the partners of the project, after a careful analysis of the complex network of European and national regulations in force, strong in their practical knowledge within the limits of their regional professional competences, will work out: models for the accreditation of any basic acquired competence when starting a course; instruments aiming either at assessing professional competences or at providing an incentive to self-training; minimal standards of competence characterising the professional profile of the "Higher level Technician competent in tourist organisation and marketing" production of various didactic materials (tests, hyper-texts, simulations, etc.) that will be easily accessible and inexpensive, in compliance with the objectives, and adjusted to the professional standards required at a European level. The project can be motivated as follows: at present there are no methods or instruments aiming at assessing or evaluating the accreditation of competences - sometimes quite remarkable - accumulated in formal and informal training programs it is certainly necessary to confront professional skills at a European level it is moreover necessary to open up to confrontation, which, also within the limits of one's profession, will help to improve, enlarge and refine one's experience. The ARGO project aims at promoting the re-qualification and mobility of workers in the nations that are partners in the project. The topics of the projects can be described as follows: the elaboration and dissemination of the basic European standard of base skills and technical-professional skills characterizing the profile of the "Higher level Technician competent in tourist organization and marketing". Through this study, two kinds of skills, that are usually acquired after a working experience, can be evaluated: base skills in literacy and numeracy (indispensable conditions, necessary to allow individuals devoid of a secondary school diploma, to access higher education technical-professional skills specific to the different working fields of activity the identification of a model, acknowledged in the partners' nations, for the accreditation of skills when accessing post-diploma higher education courses The identification of a standard of competence and a model for the accreditation of competence, has been limited to a well determined sector: the tourism marketing. Their definition and the methodology used and shared at a transnational level were of a primary importance.
